3 2 2

A calm, single-level home designed around light, privacy and ease of living.

Tucked quietly along a private laneway, this architect-designed residence by Scott Carpenter is centred around a simple, well resolved U-shaped layout. At its heart, a central courtyard anchors the home, drawing in natural light and creating a sense of calm separation between living and rest.

Positioned on the southern end of the home, the master suite looks north into the courtyard, capturing soft, consistent light and a private, sheltered outlook. It feels removed, yet still connected to the rhythm of the home.

At the northern end, the kitchen, living and dining are oriented to maximise sunlight and airflow. Elevated and private, this zone opens easily to the outdoors and forms the natural hub of daily living.

The additional bedrooms are arranged along the western
